Designer Diaries

Do you love interior design? Well then, we've got the site for you. Designer Diaries shares its love of design with its readers daily — and has such an eye for good design!

Designer Diaries describes itself as "dedicated to anyone in cyberspace who shares a love for interior design." Well, that's definitely us and probably all of you reading this article.

Designer Diaries is a blog by Susan Fredman Design Group, based out of Chicago, and let us tell you — they've definitely got an eye for post-worthy design. Like this great Windy City shadow box art. Artist Christine Rodrigues sweeps us away with that Sears Tower vignette. Everyone with a special place in their heart for Chicago (or a love for beautiful art in general) could use a piece like this on their wall.

Inspired by a post on our own site, Designer Diaries editor Jill Maremont shares a kitchen Q&A session with design greats Aimee Nemeckay and Jamie Myers, where they give us the initial steps in kitchen planning, common mistakes, even their stances on mismatched spice jars — a must-read for anyone undergoing a kitchen makeover.

The blog even includes great personal posts we all love to read, including a photo of the Maremonts' adorable dog, Iggy. And if you're a dog lover as well as a design lover, be sure to eye these pooch portraits. Can we get the gray poodle, please?
